The City . . .

Of Ephesus Paul wrote,

"But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost; for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries."

It is significant that Paul looked on this great city as an opportunity, and not as a source of frustration. It was a chance for him to express the claims of Christ to a great number of people. It is true that the Apostle was aware that the city contained "many adversaries," but even this prospect was not insurmountable to Paul.

The city is home to 70 percent of American families. There aren't many people down on the farm any more. If the Church is to reach the unevangelized it must penetrate the urban areas with the Lord's Word.

It is against this background that Pepperdine's Summer Lectureship will focus on THE CITY: TODAY'S OPEN DOOR. Practical lessons prepared by capable preachers will pinpoint problems and solutions.

We welcome you to this important series, characterized by new features which will increase the lectureship's interest and value to you.

What Kind of College Is Pepperdine?

Pepperdine College is an independent liberal arts Christian College for men and women. It is guided by members of churches of Christ and stresses a five-point program of distinctive education — academic excellence, spiritual emphasis, individual initiative, competitive achievement, and patriotic citizenship. The education of the whole man, his physical, mental, social, and spiritual life, is the unique mission of Pepperdine College.

Why Attend This Kind of College?

A good education calls for adequate development and discipline of the whole man. Two of the elements in this development have been well emphasized in public education, but the others are also essential. At Pepperdine, all are kept in proper balance, with the Bible serving as the foundation upon which other studies stand. That Pepperdine graduates do well in graduate study and in their life's vocations is proof of the soundness of a Bible-centered education.
