The Gift

Heather M. Hoover
hhoover@milligan.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.pepperdine.edu/leaven

Part of the Biblical Studies Commons, Christianity Commons, and the Religious Thought, Theology and Philosophy of Religion Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://digitalcommons.pepperdine.edu/leaven/vol19/iss1/11

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Religion at Pepperdine Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Leaven by an authorized editor of Pepperdine Digital Commons. For more information, please contact Katrina.Gallardo@pepperdine.edu, anna.speth@pepperdine.edu, linhgavin.do@pepperdine.edu.
The Gift
A Poem by Heather M. Hoover

Oddly heavy, translucent and white-veined,
a gift perhaps, treasure
from the land of the pharaohs.

Carefully, lovingly
she cradles it, oil sloshing inside. Each step stirring the fragrance.

Her gift now, her priceless idea, shattered
with considerable effort, more than she expected for the delicate alabaster.

A waste, poured out and broken.
And she slowly gathers
the glistening shards near his feet, careful not to pierce his flesh.

She turns them over in her hands, oil seeping into her own skin, knowing its scent will linger like the word he used anointed.

Heather M. Hoover is Assistant Professor of English and Composition and Director of Writing at Milligan College in Milligan College, Tennessee.