ABOUT NAALJ

For those who have recently joined or who may be thinking of joining, we include this brief description of our association.

The National Association of Administrative Law Judges, originally known as the National Association of Administrative Hearing Officers (NAAHO), is a nonprofit, professional organization dedicated to the improvement of the administrative hearing process. It is comprised of federal, local, and state administrative law judges, hearing officers, referees, trial examiners and commissioners, and members of appellate boards and commissions, exercising a wide variety of subject matter jurisdiction.

Established in 1974, we now have members in every state, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Australia and Canada.

NAALJ strives to enhance the quality of administrative justice, and to improve the process of dispute resolution. It serves as a forum for the exchange of ideas and information; conducts periodic seminars and training conferences; publishes a journal and a newsletter; and confers with officials of the state and federal governments on methods of improving administrative adjudication. The National Administrative Law Foundation, incorporated by NAALJ in 1980, is expressly devoted to the public interest. It sponsors an annual fellowship paper on an important topic and grants two scholarships annually for education at the National Judicial College.

Membership in NAALJ is open to persons who preside over statutory fact-finding hearings or appellate proceedings arising within, among or before public agencies, or who prepare decisions for a higher tribunal. Other persons involved in research, teaching, or improving administrative adjudication are eligible for associate membership.

National dues for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994 are $35 for all members. Many states have local chapters. The New York State Administrative Law Judges Association, the California Administrative Law Judges Association and the Illinois Association of Administrative Law Judges are among its affiliated local chapters.

To apply for membership in NAALJ, copy and complete the Membership Application at the back of the journal and mail it, along with your $35.00 check, to NAALJ c/o National Center for the State Courts, 300 Newport Avenue, Williamsburg, VA 23187-8798.
